Advocates for the future of advanced practice in Florida know for certain that \textit{unity is much more than just a word}. Since FNA began advocating for nurses in Florida, it has been critical that we are able to move forward with a sense of cooperation & collaboration. In reality, there are times when groups have had differing opinions or when they formed opinions based on misinformation or incomplete information. This is common in organizational dynamics, however, what is more important is that disagreements or dissension within groups remains within the group. It is important that discord & disagreement be treated internally because influential leaders, such as legislators, tend to dismiss groups that are not unified. This is not an assumption or an opinion; It’s a fact.

Later in this publication you will see some of the accomplishments of FNA as they relate to advanced practice. The leaders of the advanced practice movement in Florida have made many strides in establishing advanced practice and continue to enhance practice by developing relationships with legislators, educating their fellow practitioners, working on political campaigns, holding legislative forums, as well as many other strategies to position FNA to make a difference for nurse practitioners in this state.

As advance practice gained strength and recognition across the country, our physician colleagues at the Florida Medical Association (FMA) and the American Association began to take notice and more and more began to oppose efforts by nurse practitioners to practice to the full scope of their education and ability. The political climate changed and with the institution of term limits, we lost many “friends” in the legislature.

We have educated legislators, provided resources and information, and remained in the forefront of the battle for advanced practice nurses. There have been two interim studies by the Senate that recommend granting advanced practice nurses the prescriptive privilege. A coalition of advanced practice organizations, along with FNA, has come together to work on this issue. FNA representatives have met with the FMA in the Senate President’s office, thanks to the work of our lobbyists. We have visited our legislators on “The Hill” and back home in their offices. Our partners in other organizations have done the same.

Currently, one of the rationale that the FMA uses to oppose our prescribing bills has been the substance abuse problem in our state, which has been exacerbated by “pill mills” in South Florida. Several legislators have stated that if there was a prescription drug database in place then they would be more likely to support the FNA bill. It appears that a database may be in place by early next year, which would remove one more barrier to our mission.

Finally, in order to gain some leverage, we need to strengthen our power base by increasing our “war chest” via the Florida Nurses Political Action Committee (FNPAC). Through FNPAC, FNA donates money to candidates who have told us that they would support our issues. As we gear up for mid-term elections and what promises to be a tumultuous legislative session, with even more pressing issue with our state budget, we need to pool our financial resources to be able to make a significant impact with contributions to candidates and to the political parties.

We have said over and over that as nurses, we may not love the political game, but we have to play it if we want to meet our goals. FNA needs nurses not only to contribute to FNPAC, but to go out to meet legislators/candidates and make themselves known as nurse practitioners. If the restrictions on practice impact your ability to provide the best care, share that with your legislator. The care of patients is too important to be impeded by turf issues.

And one final note, to those ARNP’s who feel like you can leave this work up to others, there is no guarantee that laws will not be considered in the future that can directly affect your practice. We need NP’s to engage and to look beyond their practice and see the big picture. Protect your practice, protect your future and don’t depend on others to do it for you. Engage and unite. Join FNA and help us to continue to improve advanced practice in Florida.
The 2010 Legislative Session was a challenging one for everyone involved, and the nurses were no exception. Tensions were running high in Tallahassee after challenging budget negotiations, the Governor’s veto of a couple of leadership priority bills, and Charlie Crist’s announcement that he will run for the U.S. Senate as an Independent. Your lobbying team, consisting of Robert M. Levy, his associate Jose Diaz and Anna Small, worked diligently throughout session to advance FNA priorities. We were lucky to have lots of help from members around the state.

Two of FNA’s priority issues saw no movement in committee. The Safe Staffing bill, SB 114/ HB 377, by Senator Dave Aronberg and Representative Ron Brisé was never heard and the bill which would permit Controlled Substance Prescribing by ARNPs, SB 188/ HB 677, by Senator Mike Bennett and Representative Juan Carlos Zapata, also received little attention. Senator Bennett did point out on numerous occasions that if ARNPs were permitted to practice to the full extent of their education, training and experience, significant healthcare dollars would be saved.

We successfully lobbied to amend HB 747 regarding the care of diabetic children in schools to eliminate the requirement that school nurses train other school employees on the care and treatment of diabetic children. Naturally, school nurses work with the schools to accommodate the needs of these children and provide a safe environment. However, school nurses cannot be expected to fully train other employees to provide care for these children who have complicated health care issues. The bill now simply prohibits school districts from requiring students to attend specific schools based on their diagnosis. Additionally, children who are independent with their care may carry their own supplies.

HB 1337/ SB 2530 by Representative Denise Grismley, RN, and Senator J.D. Alexander passed and has been signed into law. We successfully lobbied to include the proper definition of nurse accrediting agencies so that only the National League for Nursing Accrediting Commission (NLN-AC) and the Commission on Collegiate Nursing Commission (CCNE) are acceptable accrediting agencies for nursing education programs. If a program is accredited by one of those two agencies, it will essentially be exempt from the Board of Nursing’s jurisdiction. We also successfully lobbied to permit nursing education programs to obtain NCLEX scores by student name for self-evaluation purposes. Schools will be prohibited from distributing this private information, but will be able to use it to evaluate their own program success.

We successfully protected state employed health care professionals from proposed pay cuts. Unfortunately our colleagues at the state have not had a raise in five years now, but we did manage to avoid a pay cut this year. Unfortunately, we were unable to preserve the funding for the Florida Center for Nursing. This was a major disappointment of the session and we will continue to support the Center.

As we emerge from session, please take some time to consider how your involvement can help us make more gains in the future. Take some time to get involved in a political campaign or start planning your next trip to Tallahassee!

A Word From a FNA ARNP Member
By Jan Hess, DNP, ARNP

Why aren’t more of the 13,000 Florida Licensed ARNPs members of FNA and involved in political advocacy? Is the answer that today’s nurses lack the time, money and/or civic knowledge to be involved in their professional organization and its political activism (Cramer, 2002; Des Jardin, 2001)? Is it because political awareness or action once embraced by nursing’s historical leaders such as Nightingale, Wald & Dix, is no longer included in today’s nurses’ definition of their clinical role? Or is the answer that nurses have simply become disillusioned (as have the general public) with politics as usual?

It is impossible for FNA to always find a political position that every ARNP agrees with. At times, ARNPs have become frustrated and angry over the political process. Over my 40 years of practice and political advocacy, there have been times when I have become extremely frustrated with the process and called FNA with my concerns; but I always stayed a member so that I would have a voice. In the 100 years of FNA political advocacy that I researched for my DNP, it is evident that without FNA standing guard and persevering, harmful bills would have been passed and good legislation supporting ARNP practice would have been lost.

Regardless of what the answer may be as to why more nurses are not involved in their professional organization and its political advocacy efforts, the ultimate answer lies within you. YOU decide to get involved or not.

Buresh & Gorden (2006) said, “Envision how things would be if the voice and visibility of nursing was commensurate with the size and importance of nursing.” I say to you, “Envision how things would be if the approximate 13,000 ARNPs were members of FNA and engaged in the organization’s political presence and efforts.”

Throughout the years, FNA has worked diligently to push ARNP legislative priorities forward such as:

- Change to the Nurse Practice Act that included the definition of ARNP and scope of practice with the Board of Nursing retaining regulatory authority (1979);
- Joint Committee approval for ARNP prescriptive privileges for medications other than controlled substances under protocol agreement (1987);
- ARNP practice still regulated under Board of Nursing, in spite of numerous attempts by Board of Medicine to move ARNP practice under its regulation;
- Clinical privileges and scope of practice bills that expanded practice, including being recognized and reimbursed providers who can complete Florida State physicals;
- Bill requiring labeling of medications with ARNP name, not supervising physicians;
- Inclusion as healthcare provider who can complete disabled parking permits for patients;
- Protection of ARNPs practicing in mental health, the Nurse Psychotherapist bill passed to include ARNPs as providers protected under confidentiality privileges;
- Bill passed that added ARNPs to list of providers granted civil immunity when obtaining informed consents; and
- Clinical laboratories bill mandating that labs must accept and complete laboratory requests on the order of ARNPs (2009).
